DOSSIA JOINS CONTINUA HEALTH ALLIANCE, HIGHLIGHTS OPEN STANDARDS FOR HEALTHCARE TECHNOLOGY

Organizations share like-minded vision of consumer empowerment through access to health information

PORTLAND, Ore., October 13, 2008 – As consumers continue to demonstrate a desire to be more active and informed participants in their healthcare, industry leaders are joining forces to answer this need with real technology solutions based on open, industry standards. In this setting, Dossia has joined the Continua Health Alliance, a not-for-profit group of technology, medical device and health and industry fitness luminaries addressing the lifestyle, health and demographic trends contributing to the skyrocketing costs of healthcare.

As a Contributor member of the Continua Health Alliance, Dossia will lend its industry expertise in breaking down barriers to data and transforming healthcare. In the past two years, Continua has made critical strides toward improving the quality of healthcare through implementing technology standards and certification of medical devices for use across the industry. Dossia will lead the effort to ensure critical personal health data from consumers can be collected with data from healthcare institutions into a complete personal, private, and portable health record.

“Consumer adoption of healthcare technology, such as personally controlled health records and home health monitoring devices, is rapidly evolving. Equipping individuals with a more complete picture of their health will allow patients as consumers to facilitate better personal health outcomes and help lower out-of-control costs,” said Colin Evans, President and CEO of Dossia. “Dossia is looking forward to membership in the Continua Health Alliance and participating in Continua Working Groups and Summits. Our organizations have a complementary approach to empowering individuals to make smarter, more informed health decisions.”

“The need for tangible ways in which to address our nation’s healthcare dilemmas is high, and Continua member companies have demonstrated a critical ability to work together on real solutions for the good of health consumers,” said Dave Whitlinger, Chairman of the Continua Health Alliance. “Dossia has demonstrated an ability to mobilize large employers to break down barriers to healthcare information, and we look forward to the progress Dossia will help enable as part of the Alliance.”
